Philly's voice heard through Kickstarter

Crowdfunding. The Kickstarter online platform is helping Philly groups get their voices heard.

Kickstarter is a simple concept — a website for groups with a specific project who need help fundraising. But in Philly, it's been a huge boon for small businesses and unique projects.

"Kickstarter was absolutely essential in the story of Pizza Brain getting known outside of Philadelphia," said Brian Dwyer, founder of the famous neighborhood pizzeria and pizza museum in Fishtown.

"It was the beginning of the whole domino effect of getting national attention," Dwyer said. "We've had people from Tokyo to Germany to Downingtown, [Pa.], come through our doors and say they read about us somewhere or heard about us

With their Kickstarter campaign, which ended in April 2012, Pizza Brain raised $16,000 to put the finishing touches on its shop.

"When they walk in from the neighborhood, they have the pride in knowing this was something they did with us," Dwyer said. "I don't think Pizza Brain would look the same magical way if we hadn't done that."

Controversy

The Curio Theatre is on Kickstarter seeking help to put its controversial lesbian production of "Romeo and Juliet" on DVD.

- "Since there was a lot of cyber-bullying going on, we felt people would want to see this independently," said Harry Slack. "It's for people who didn't get a chance to see it."

Ice Cream ran a smaller Kickstarter campaign but also raised their profile thanks to the website. They raised about $6,000 to get reusable cups to serve their pints in, instead of disposable paper cups.

"Presently, we use the exact same packaging that we purchased with these funds," said Pete Angevine, co-owner and co-founder of the ice cream shop.

Currently using Kickstarter for Philly projects are many small businesses, such as Gerald Lawson's Dhengi Brand clothing.

"My brand is for everybody — even aliens," Lawson said of his Brewerytown-grown clothing brand.

Lawson is raising funds to launch Dhengi Brand's new fashion line. Since the death of his business partner last year, he's redoubling efforts to raise the profile of Dhengi (pronounced like "dingy").

"I'm definitely trying to go to a new level," Lawson said. "Before [his partner] passed, we would always talk about the brand moving forward, across the U.S."

Lawson has 45 days to raise about $6,500. It's his first attempt with Kickstarter, which he heard about after Spike Lee funded a project on the site.

Philadelphia's Data Garden, a trans-digital conservatory, is on Kickstarter trying to raise $25,000 to get its "MIDI Sprout" bio-data sonification device — which converts plant bio-rhythms into audible tones — developed as a real instrument for distribution.

"We've been using this technology ourselves for two years," said co-founder Joe Patitucci. "People just kept asking us, 'How can [we] do it [ourselves]?' We decided we want to make it really easy for other people to make music with plants and get this technology out there."

Buzz. 'Drunk History' taped in Philly, will premiere in June

Popular Comedy Central television show "Drunk History" set a season two premiere date and this year, one of its storytelling ventures starts at a Philadelphia bar.

The 10-episode second season begins on June 24 and earlier this year, an episode was filmed at McGillin's Olde Ale House in Center City.

"Drunk History" is a web series turned comedy show, created by Derek Waters and Jeremy Konner, where an intoxicated narrator tells a — usually convoluted — story from an event in American history while famous actors lip sync and act out the dialogue — however slurred it may be.

Big names have appeared in the series including Jack Black, Bob Odenkirk, Winona Ryder and more.

Other featured cities this season include Baltimore, Charleston and Honolulu. METRO

Filed last week in three states, the lawsuits claim the well-known restaurant chain deliberately cut employees' pay and enforced unfair work practices such as working longer hours without compensation.

"Since November 2012 fast-food workers have been campaigning for $15 and the right to form a union without retaliation," according to a news release.

The lawsuit demands the chain pay back the stolen wages and change its policies.

"As an employee, I have often questioned my pay," said Justin Watson, McDonald's employee and Philadelphia resident.

McDonald's has refuted the claims. METRO

Cop arrested on assault charges

Fracas. Officer Robbi Huff allegedly assaulted her boyfriend in Montgomery County.

More on Huff

Reports say Huff was also arrested in September 2012 for assaulting the same boyfriend.

- Huff was also the former partner of Officer Richard DeCoatsworth, who left the department after being charged with promoting prostitution, assault and distributing heroin.

A Philadelphia police officer is suspended after being arrested in Montgomery County for allegedly fighting with her boyfriend, and faces criminal charges, according to police.

Officer Robbi Huff, 35, a 15-year veteran of the Philadelphia Police Department assigned to the Highway Patrol Unit, was arrested in Cheltenham Township on March 13 and faces charges of simple assault and disorderly conduct.

The domestic incident for which Huff was arrested reportedly arose after Cheltenham Township police were called to the home of her boyfriend, where they allegedly found the boyfriend with visible injuries to his face.

Police Commissioner Charles Ramsey suspended Huff Monday for 30 days with the intent to dismiss. METRO

Putin signs Crimea treaty, will not seize other regions

Rally. Putin's speech drew immediate hostile reaction in Kiev and the West.

Defying Ukrainian protests and Western sanctions, Russian President Vladimir Putin signed a treaty on Tuesday making Crimea part of Russia again but said he did not plan to seize any other regions of Ukraine.

In a fiercely patriotic address to a joint session of parliament in the Kremlin, punctuated by standing ovations, cheers and tears, Putin said Crimea's disputed referendum vote on Sunday, held under Russian military occupation, had shown the overwhelming will of the people to be reunited with Russia.

US vows more sanctions over Russia

The Obama administration on Tuesday vowed to Crimean leaders signed a treaty to make Crimea part of the Russian Federation, declaring: "In the hearts and minds of people, Crimea has always been and remains an inseparable part of Russia." Parliament is expected to begin ratifying the treaty within days.

Area of the Malaysia plane search now size of Australia

Path. Thailand said a re-examination of its military radar had picked up the plane.

An international land and sea search for a missing Malaysian jetliner is covering an area the size of Australia, authorities said on Tuesday, but police and intelligence agencies have yet to establish a clear motive to explain its disappearance.

Investigators are convinced that someone with deep knowledge of the Boeing 777-200ER and commercial navigation diverted Malaysia Airlines Flight MH370, carrying 12 crew and 227 mainly Chinese passengers, perhaps thousands of miles off its scheduled course from Kuala Lumpur to Beijing.

But intensive background checks of everyone aboard have so far failed to find anyone with a known political or criminal motive to hijack or deliberately crash the plane, Western security sources said.

Courtney Love is about as stable as Los Angeles was at 6:25 a.m. on Monday. If given the choice, I would not elect Courtney to the position of Flight 370 Finder-in-Chief. For that, I'd probably go with an international team of aviation experts. However, the international team of aviation experts haven't turned up much, have they? Every day they widen the search area so much that I presume we'll soon be looking on the moon. Courtney Love, on the other hand, believes she knows exactly where it is, so maybe we ought to give her a shot.

"I'm no expert but up close this does look like a plane and an oil slick," she tweeted, with a link to the photo above.

She then tweeted that the plane was "like a mile away Pulau Perak, where they 'last' tracked it."

I really don't know what I'll do with myself if it turns out she's right. Then again, "Courtney Love Finding Missing People All Around the World Through the Power of MS Paint" is definitely a TV show I'd watch. MELINDA TAUB

Eerie online posts come from L'Wren Scott after suicide

Designer L'Wren Scott's sudden death was made even more shocking when her social media accounts continued posting several hours after she died. Because of previously scheduled posts or a PR team that wasn't yet aware of her passing, several Facebook posts and tweets appeared after her death was announced, confusing and upsetting her followers. Perhaps the eeriest image was the above photo of several of L'Wren's designs hung from a tree and apparently lit from within, which appeared on the designer's Facebook hours after her death was announced. A strange, ghostly image indeed, after the designer's apparent suicide.

Her Twitter account also remained active, leaving some fans unsure of whether her death was a hoax or not. Fashion blogger Bryan Boy shared a befuddled screenshot and tweeted, "But L'Wren tweeted 3 hours ago???"

'That '70s' wedding shocks the cast

Ashton Kutcher and Mila Kunis are set to tie the knot and seem ridiculously happy together, and no one is more surprised than their former "That '70s Show" colleagues. "Everyone shakes their head over the romance," a source says, explaining that the pair "despised each other" while making the hit sitcom, according to Radar Online. "Ashton and Mila were absolutely not friends during much of the making of 'That 70s Show.' In fact, they couldn't stand working together." That all changed, apparently, after Kutcher's very public split from ex-wife Demi Moore. "Mila was the one who came forward to bury the hatchet," the source explains. "Everyone's amazed at how different Ashton and Mila are together from when they were younger. It's such a total change."

'Bad' to the bone

Interview.

Jason Bateman didn't want to make another heartwarming tale about a jerk softening up.

For his directorial debut, Jason Bateman puts some pretty terrible words in his mouth as Guy Trilby, a grown-up spelling bee contestant making life difficult for his tween-aged competitors with some truly withering insults. That coarseness was something Bateman didn't want to shy away from. "No one needs to see another PG spelling bee movie. We've seen those," he says with a laugh. "Or another heartwarming tale about an adult befriend[ing] a child or vice versa. There's a bunch of great movies that have done that and I didn't want to do another one of those."

Luckily Bateman had an ace in the hole to avoid things getting too dark: himself. Known more for playing the nice guy, Bateman as an actor has a decent amount of goodwill built up with audiences on which to rely. "I wasn't afraid about pushing the envelope as far as possible because I knew that I'd be playing the character, and I was somewhat confident that I would be able to play him in a way where you would excuse his behavior," Bateman says. "Or at least I knew that would be a nice challenge for me. I don't know whether I hit the target, it's not for me to say. But I do like that I was increasing my odds of hitting that narrow target and managing that very specific tone by being able to have a huge presence on camera as well as behind the camera."

Surprisingly, Jason Bateman the actor was not

On directing

Behind the lens

Wearing both hats did prove logistically challenging in other ways. "As a director, you can sit there and you can know exactly what you're getting as you're getting it. I didn't have that perspective," he says. "We had to adjust our process a little bit where we would rehearse a lot more with my stand-in in there so I could see what the camera was seeing. Then once I was satisfied that everybody was doing it the way I thought that it needed to be done, then I went in front of the camera. And then after a couple of takes I would go and watch playback. If you watch every take in playback, by definition you've doubled your time in the day, so I couldn't do that. I had to be judicious with that."

Jason Bateman the director's first choice for "Bad Words," but he eventually managed to talk himself into it. "I went after some pretty big actors, some heroes of mine to play the part, and they were either too busy or not interested," he admits. "Then I thought, 'Maybe I should play the part because it's actually going to end up being a little easier.' For better or worse, every single take is going to be exactly the way that I want it. You have no idea how long it takes sometimes for a director and an actor to get on the same page while the whole crew waits before you can roll."

Lifelong friends.

Emily Mortimer and Dolly Wells teamed with Azazel Jacobs to make "Doll & Em."

Best of the besties

In the HBO comedy "Doll & Em," Dolly Wells becomes the personal assistant of her lifelong bestie, the actress Emily Mortimer. Over six episodes, Mortimer and Wells, who has so far largely worked in British comedy (including being one of Bridget Jones' buds), explore a friendship as a crack runs slowly through it. In real life, only the bes-tie part (and Mortimer's Hollywood stardom) is true.

"We have a shorthand where we can understand each other," Wells explains.

"We find things funnier sooner than somebody watching us. We fill silences with words," says Mortimer. "We needed someone else in our lives."

That person became

Azazel Jacobs, the filmmaker of oddly rhythmic comedies like "Mamma's Man" and "Terri." (He's also the son of avant-garde titan Ken Jacobs.) "I think if there's anything I brought to the process, it was being someone who's outside a relationship that's so incredibly tight," Jacobs says. "They have their own language. They don't have to say many words for the other person to understand them. I felt like a conduit. I could sense what the audience would feel like [watching them]."

Mortimer and Wells had long wanted to work together. They thought it would be funny if Wells played an assistant, and modeled the overall arc — in which Wells starts getting more attention than Mortimer — on "All About Eve." Another influence was the Harold Pinter-scripted psychological thriller "The Servant" (albeit told with two giggly, sweet-natured people deathly afraid of confrontation).

They brought in Jacobs, who they had known since his days studying at the American Film Institute. He suggested making it into a self-contained TV show. They shot a test pilot while Mortimer was filming "The Newsroom." The test became the first 20-minute episode.

A Doll's house

What's in a name?

That Dolly Wells and Emily Mortimer are called Dolly and Emily on HBO's "Doll & Em" wasn't always intended. "We were calling each other by our real names, thinking it wouldn't be seen by anyone but us," says Mortimer. "We were too lazy to come up with others." Their fate was sealed when Jacobs labeled the file of the test episode "Doll & Em," which still makes them queasy.

"We've had moments of hating it," says Mortimer.

Jacobs agrees: "Their friendship is where this came from. That's what's being celebrated here. At the very base of this is something true, and that's in those names."

Jacobs wrote the scripts with Mortimer and Wells.

"It became what we then decided what we wanted it to be, which was a movie with all the aesthetic qualities of a filmmaker's movie, made over six episodes," Mortimer says. "It has the production values and the sensibility of a movie. But it just happens to be on television."

The fact that it's about showbiz came about not because they had a burning desire to add to the deep genre devoted to it.

"We tried other things before, but they weren't things we knew very well, particularly," says Wells. "The idea of being actors we both really knew about.

There was something about me being an assistant that really resonated with us, because it seemed so funny and sad at the same time. That's our humor. There's a darkness to it."

Fresh new homes available this spring

Check out these residential projects we're keeping an eye on.

JULIA WEST

Kensington

2201 E. Norris

Lawrence McKnight, President of BKM Properties, is expecting to break ground on this three-story, three-bedroom home this week. He anticipates about six months for completion, but mentions that the weather may interfere with that. This home isn't the first in the area for BKM, and it certainly won't be the last.

"Demand is outpacing our ability to deliver," says McKnight. "We keep telling people we can't build them fast enough." McKnight also says that he's very connected to the Fishtown and Kensington neighborhoods where he's building: "We live in the neighborhood. If something goes wrong, we're right there to fix it."

The Perks: Third-floor master suite with balcony, roof deck with a view of Center City, hardwood floors, and what McKnight is calling a "grandiose" foyer.

Pennsport

Metropolis

Metropolis at Second and Wharton is 17 townhomes being built by Rock Construction and Development. "The developer and I sat down and discussed all of the things that a buyer is looking for and tried to include all of those things as standard items in these homes," says Noah Ostroff, realtor at Coldwell Banker Preferred. The estimated completion date is late summer, leaving us just a few months to pack up our boxes and get over to the ever-evolving Pennsport neighborhood.

The Perks: Three bedrooms, 2.5 baths, roughly 3,000 square feet, fiber-glass roof deck, two-car garage.

NoLibs

On the boards

Two proposed buildings have been shown to the Northern Liberties Neighbors Association zoning committee. The first is at 420-42 Fairmount Ave. It'll replace an old warehouse with 48 apartments. The second is a proposed 108-unit building at 312 Fairmount Ave., being developed by Klein Company. The NLNA asked that both projects be scaled down.

One more

Is Fishtown your new 'hood?

Lawrence McKnight tells us about the growing popularity of the area he calls home. "At some point the market will get saturated. Everyone and their brother wants to be in and build in Fishtown," he says. "Expanding out to East Kensington and Port Richmond in general is great to see. There are a lot of entry-level first-time home buyers in this area, and they're making retail and restaurants happen, too."

Are you interested in starting your own business but looking for the perfect venue? Look no further! The Ogontz Avenue Revitalization Corporation (OARC), has several affordable commercial properties for rent in West Oak Lane. These properties are located in areas with a high volume of foot traffic and close to public transportation, shopping, and various restaurants. Several properties also include off-street parking. We have spaces available ranging from 650 sq. ft. to 3500 sq. ft. and rents ranging from $1000 to $3500 a month. To schedule a private viewing of the property, call OARC Property Management at 215-549-9462.

The dirt on keeping clean

Chores. Boyfriend barfed in your handbag? "Ask a Clean Person" columnist Jolie Kerr has a solution.

Bonus question

Why is keeping a clean and orderly home important?

It can make life easier, for sure. Things like not losing your keys, or realizing too late on an interview day that your lucky blouse has a stain on it — those are benefits of keeping things orderly. But some people thrive on chaos, so getting into why being clean is "important" isn't so much my focus. ... If people want my help, I'm available, but I'm not interested in dictating to people how to live.

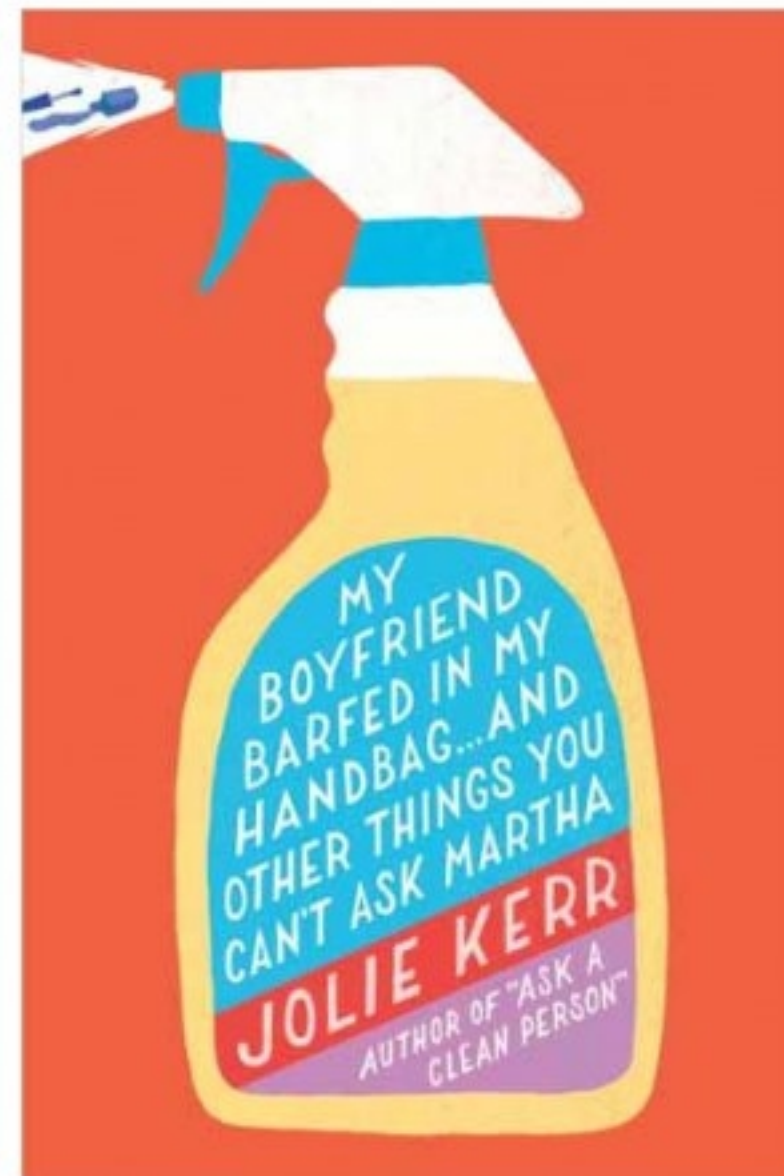

Take heart, not-so-clean person: With a delightful mix of self-help and humor, Jolie Kerr is here to turn your messy life into one of order and beauty (or at the very least, inspire you to make your bed in the morning). In "My Boyfriend Barfed in My Handbag ... and Other Things You Can't Ask Martha," Kerr has taken the tricks and advice that made her column, "Ask a Clean Person," so popular on Deadspin and Jezebel, and compiled them into one handy and, yes, neat book.

What is the No. 1 cleaning dilemma for apartment-dwellers?

Too much stuff/too little space for it. Though, to be frank, this happens to homeowners, too. But smaller spaces present storage challenges that can be so difficult for people to overcome. Generally speaking, there needs to be a combination of getting rid of things and finding the right storage solutions for the things you do have.

What is the most overlooked cleaning task for women? For men?

I actually don't think there's much of a gender divide there. The questions I get from men and women are more similar than dissimilar. One exception would be bra washing for women — the ladies are really just not washing their bras often enough!

How did you become a clean person?

Gosh, this is the $64,000 question! I was sort of always this way, which is a terribly unsatisfying answer. And I started writing my column as mostly a hobby — it was just a fun thing I did, sharing the body of knowledge I'd built up over the years.

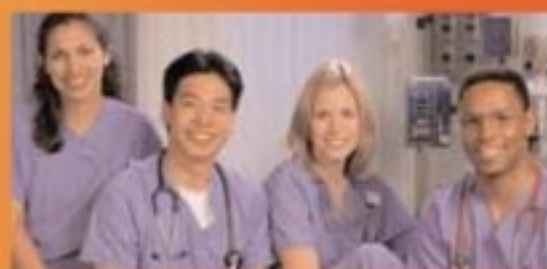

Which is the one cleaning item you can't live without and why?

Scrubbing Bubbles. I mean, there are so many to choose from, but yeah, those bubbles delight me. I clean my bathroom twice a week, so having a product that basically does all my work for me is so marvelous.

What is the first step a not-so-clean person can take to put them on the path of order and cleanliness?

Committing to writing what they'd like their home to look and feel like is something I can't recommend enough. ... Identifying where your home makes you feel panicked or bad and then considering how you'd like to change that is a really powerful step.

"This is why I don't do selfies. I hate selfies! It's too wide, it's too wide!" Karl Lagerfeld says. We're in a hotel suite in Mayfair, London, and I'm following him from one corner of the room to another as we search for the correct light and the right angle to take the perfect Instagram.

launch is almost like recreation for me. It's different from the normal daily discipline and work.

There's been a lot of talk this week about something called normcore. It's the idea of looking plain or boring, but with intention and

KARL LAGERFELD

We catch up with the designer in London to talk about street style and the recent Chanel fashion show everyone is still buzzing about.

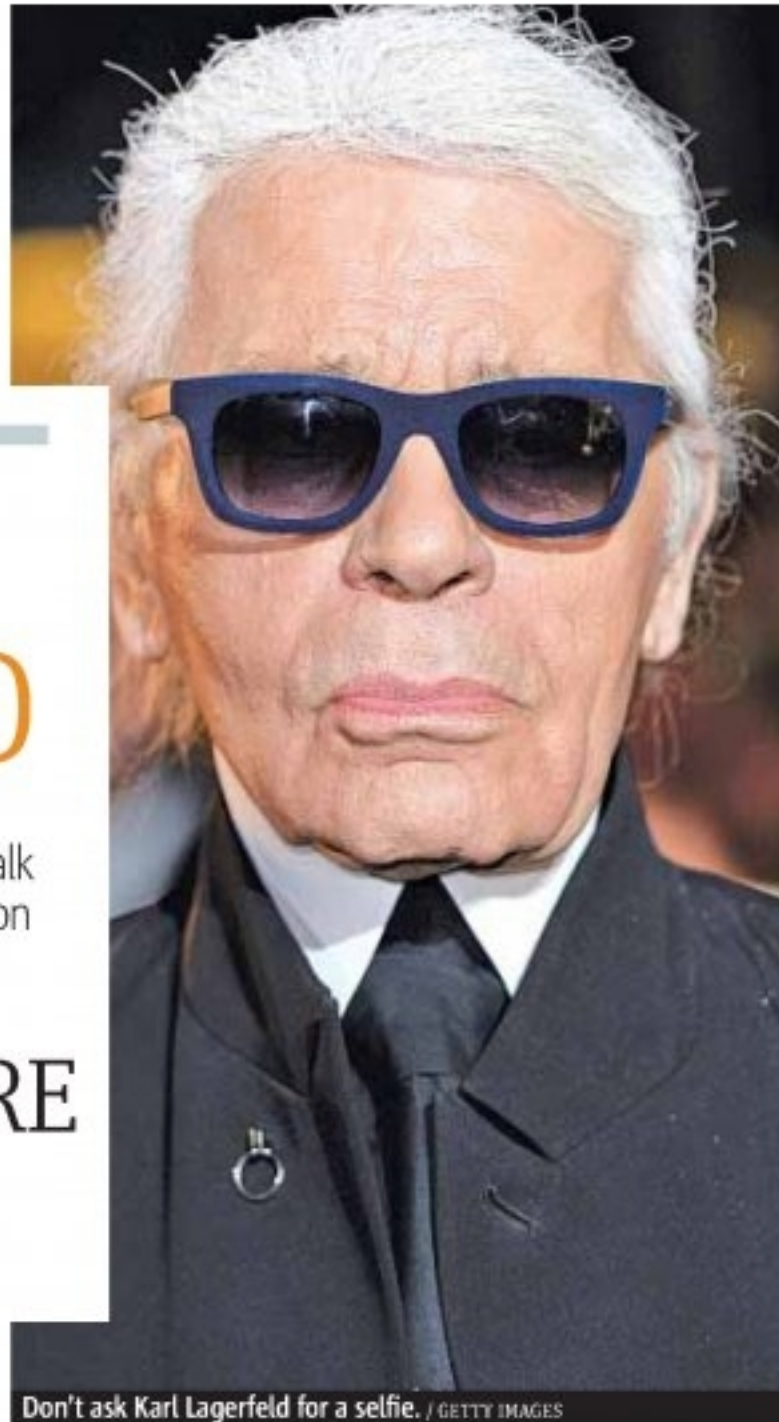

SELFIES, NORMCORE AND MORE

Karl looks remarkably energetic considering that he's just gotten off a plane from Paris for a quick trip to London to celebrate the launch of his first flagship store in the U.K. for his eponymous clothing line and his new perfume range. He plans to fly back home as soon as the parties are over. But first there is an interview to do and selfies to take. "I think they're electronic masturbation," he says. But he does one for us anyway.

You've opened a new store and launched a new perfume. This is a big week for you. This is a big week, but I'm used to this kind of week so I don't consider them really big. For me, it's a normal week. I do so many things at the same time. I do photos. I work on the collections to come, cruise and all that. For me, something like a irony. Some people don't have to make an effort to look boring, eh? I don't know how irony and plainness can go together. Me, I look the way I look. My look was not a marketing process. I had shirts with high collars already 30 years ago. I can show you photos from Helmut Newton in the '70s with shirts like this. No, I don't want to have a plain look. But perhaps I should because I cannot cross the street without people wanting to photograph me. But the word "plain" alone is something that even with irony I prefer to escape. But I'd have to see photographs of this normcore and see it visually and decide.

Your clothes are obvious hits on the street style circuit. What do you say to those who argue that street style culture has gone too far?

This [street style debate] is a fake problem. Everything changes. We live in the middle of change. Look at how the world has changed since this and all that. The computer has changed it all. Fashion is about change, and the world is about change, too. The changes in the world are not as quick as the changes in fashion. But we are in the middle of a huge change. I say: Don't compare the present to the past if you want to survive happily in the next period. You have to adapt. Times don't have to adapt to you. And then you start to say, "Oh the good old days!" And then you're over.

EDUCATION TOWARDS EMPLOYMENT

Bonus question

You set the Chanel show in a supermarket. When was the last time you went grocery shopping?

In a photo shoot for ELLE magazine. You see, it's a part of daily life today on every social level. Everyone goes to the supermarket. That's why

I had in the center of the show the chic couple with the Chanel bag because also they go there. It's like a modern pop world. But I don't shop. The show was unbelievable. And people stole everything out of there. Even the food, eh? And the food was supposed to go to the poor.

THE BIG PLATFORMS HAVE SOME NEW GAMES

It's been several months since the Xbox One and Playstation 4 started invading our already overstuffed living rooms. However, there really hasn't been all that much to, you know, play on either console. The drought begins to lift now. Here are thoughts on AAA exclusive titles for each.

'Titanfall'

System: Xbox One
Company: Electronic Arts

The "Halo" series almost single-handedly made the Xbox and the Xbox 360 household names, so it's only fitting that another first-person shooter would help put the new console on the map. "Titanfall" actually brings new ideas to the table, which could help bring new players to the genre. The gameplay is lightning fast and kinetic, calling to mind "Mirror's Edge" rather than "Call of Duty." Also, it must be noted, you can get in gigantic mechs and blast the crap out of everyone you see. When is that ever not cool?

About the only downside here is the underwhelming campaign, which features some half-baked missions and mediocre voice acting. Seriously, though, this is a game for people who want to blow their friends up — and to that end, it is an absolute marvel.

'Infamous: Second Son'

System: PlayStation 4
Company: Sony Computer Entertainment

The major complaint with these new consoles is that the games don't seem, uh, next gen-y enough. The third installment of the "Infamous" series might finally put an end to all of that talk. This game looks good. Much of the environment is destructible and everything just looks so, for lack of a better word, shiny.

For newbs, "Infamous: Second Son" is an open-world action game in which you have a bunch of cool superpowers. Think "X-Men" mixed with "GTA" and you'd have a good jumping-off point. If you have to ask if this game is good, just read that last sentence again. It's awesome! The controls are tight, the map is filled with cool Seattle landmarks (even Sub Pop HQ) and you can fly by turning into a puff of smoke.

Emotional stress may trigger heart trouble in women

Location of study: U.S.

Study subjects: 24 women, 16 of whom had microvascular dysfunction

Results: In an effort to better understand gender-related coronary artery disease, researchers at Cedars-Sinai Heart Institute studied the effects of emotional stress on women with a type of coronary artery disease called microvascular dysfunction. The condition occurs when the smaller arteries of the heart fail to work properly. Researchers found that the emotional stress of anger may contribute to the disease, which can lead to heart attacks and other cardiac issues.

Significance: The study sheds light on the differences between male and female coronary artery disease. Most men with the disease typically exhibit blockages in the large arteries, while many women do not. Researchers also say that since smaller arteries are partly controlled by the nerve network that regulates heart rate, our thoughts and emotions may impact blood flow in these small vessels.

Migraine sufferers, rejoice

Location of study: Belgium

Study subjects: 67 people with frequent migraines

Results: In a recent study, a battery-operated device that uses external cranial neurostimulation to prevent migraines resulted in a significant drop in overall migraine frequency. The Cefaly device, which resembles a headband, is to be worn daily for 20 minutes before the onset of a migraine. When compared to those who used a placebo device, patients who used Cefaly reported an up to 75 percent reduction in the amount of migraine medications they consumed.

Significance: The results of the study were so impressive, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration has approved it for use in the United States. The Cefaly medical device will hit the U.S. market in early April and will be available through a prescription.

Trial underway to test prostate cancer vaccine

Location of study: U.S.

Study subjects: Men with newly diagnosed, localized prostate cancer

Results: If successful, a developmental prostate cancer vaccine may potentially trigger the body's own immune system to kill cancer cells. The treatment, called ProstatAtak, is designed for early-stage prostate cancer. It works through a series of three injections. Each is accompanied by antiviral pills and standard radiation therapy. The combination seems to awaken the immune system to attack the cancer.

Significance: With the immune system jump-started, the patient potentially develops a lifelong immunity specific to their cancer. This circulating immunity may also be enough to mop up any leftover cancer cells throughout the body. In a previous study, the treatment was associated with a significant decrease in expected tumor recurrence. A study at Advanced Radiation Centers of New York (ARC) and Memorial Sloan Kettering Cancer Center is currently enrolling patients with newly diagnosed, localized prostate cancer.

Which workstation alternatives are worth it?

Work better. These tools give new meaning to the phrase “desk job.”

“Sitting is death,” a colleague likes to remind the Metro newsroom. Morbid? Yes. True? Alas, yes.

The studies are in, and they are all horrible. A damning report from the journal Diabetologia, which looked at 18 studies involving nearly 800,000 people, found that the average adult spends 50 to 70 percent of his or her time sitting, and that those who sit the most had “a 112 percent increase in their relative risk of developing diabetes, a 147 percent increase in their risk for cardiovascular disease and a 49 percent greater risk of dying prematurely — even if they regularly exercised.”

What’s a chronic sitter, aka the average office worker, to do? We need to change how we work. So, we looked at three alternative office chairs and workstations to gauge how realistic they are in the workplace.

The Buoy

Overview: If you’ve always wanted to sit on a stability ball at your desk but think you need something a bit more professional, the aptly named Buoy is your chair. The Buoy (starting at $199) is basically a wobbly stool with no back, so it encourages movement and sitting up straight. It is not scientifically proven to be healthier for you, but if you take the chair’s hint — move! — it can be very beneficial.

The Buoy is a wobbly backless chair. / PROVIDED

Review: While attractive and fun, the Buoy isn’t an all-day desk chair. But for brief periods, it’s great. Ideally, we’d love to use Buoy around a small conference table for more casual meetings.

FitDesk X

Overview: This is a bike desk — so basically a stationary bike with a desk platform in front of the handlebars. The FitDesk X is streamlined so it doesn’t take up too much space. Its workstation has room for a laptop and is tilted so that typing while biking is possible, although we primarily used it to browse social media (for work, of course). As bike desks go, it’s comfortable, quiet and, at around $250, within most budgets. Plus, it folds up easily. Frankly, it’s a great invention, one that will help a lot of people make sure they don’t die an early death while updating their Facebook accounts.

Review: We all thought the FitDesk X would be our savior. Work out while at work? It was too good to be true. And it was. The FitDesk was novel but it’s hardly been used. Why? Because it’s awkward to be huffing and puffing next to your co-workers and then go into a meeting slightly sweaty. It’s perfect for home while surfing the ‘net and watching TV, but not so much the office. However, if you are in the market for a bike desk, we highly recommend the FitDesk X.

Our favorite

NextDesk Solo Plus

Overview: NextDesk is the Mercedes-Benz of standing desks, made in the USA using sleek, sustainable materials such as natural bamboo and recycled aluminum. Sure, it’s stylish, but what makes it so great is that it has a quiet internal motor, letting you go from seated to upright in seconds. There are many different models to choose from — some very large and beautiful — but we tested one of the smallest versions, the NextDesk Solo Plus. Unlike many standing desks, the NextDesk Solo Plus provides plenty of room for your desktop computer (not just laptop) and keyboard.

Review: Our art director called the NextDesk Solo Plus “the greatest thing to ever happen to Metro.” Our movie critic said he felt “refreshed and lively” at the end of the day. This is the revolution office workers have been waiting for. There is only one (big) drawback: the price. The one we tried comes in around $1,000, which is a lot for a workstation. But if you have the means, this is the desk to buy.

The USSR caused its own demise

Re: 'Reagan did help world redecorate without the Iron Curtain' (Metro, March 18) Actually, letter writer Timothy Laren is more accurate than Dan Schwarz with regard to the USSR situation and Ronald Reagan. The Communist regime that crushed the uprisings in the 1960s was much stronger. The USSR that Gorbachev inherited was much weaker, and long before Reagan demanded that Gorbachev "tear down this wall," Russia was already making preparations for an inevitable transition. Russia's own policies were its downfall. Decades of trying to best us in an arms race and misguided domestic policies caused the USSR to implode more than any outside force. By the time Reagan showed up, the USSR was already in steep decline.

Trade rumors

Eagles unlikely to trade Jackson

Rumors are swirling about Eagles wide receiver DeSean Jackson and his lack of clarity about his future with the team. ESPN's Adam Schefter reported that while the Eagles are not actively looking to move Jackson they were open to hearing offers for him.

It begins and ends with Ryan Howard for the Phillies. If everything else goes right for the Phillies and the Big Piece goes down, it'll be a long summer at Citizens Bank Park. It's not a coincidence that the Phillies went on the greatest run in their long, mostly woebegone history, from 2007-2011, when Howard was in the heart of those lineups. Howard missed most of 2012 and 2013 and those over the last few seasons. Have you considered moving back off the plate?

Yes. I've actually moved back off the plate. That's something I'm doing during spring training. It's a work in progress. I'm trying to get used to the distance. I like how it feels.

Did you do this after watching video?

Yes. Absolutely. I think I would be more effective.

That way you won't get tied up by lefties and you have long enough arms to cover the plate and extend those arms.

I really want to extend my arms. That's something I need to give myself a chance to do and moving off the plate will definitely help that.

Is there another approach you're taking, such as possibly being more selective?

It's all going to depend on the situation. There will be times when I'll try to swing early in the count. They'll be times up there when I'll take pitches. But I don't want to ever not be aggressive. I'm going to be aggressive, even though I've shortened my swing. I'm going to try and hit the ball hard somewhere.

You lost weight and put on muscle.

I needed to do that. I have a lot of responsibility. This team is counting on me.

How are your legs?

Much better. It's huge to have my legs under me. I didn't have that the last couple of seasons. But this year, the legs are back.

Somehow you managed to drive in 56 runs in 71 games in 2012 on one leg. How did you do that?

I drive in runs. That's my

Howard by the numbers

Amount of money the Phillies have paid Howard so far in his career. The lefty will make $25 million more this season.

6

Consecutive years Howard was in the Top 4 in the National League in RBI. He led the league outright three times.

Howard has only appeared in all 162 games once in his career, in 2008 when the Phillies won the World Series.

Howard's career home run total, ranking second in Phillies history.

job. I was doing that with one leg. It'll be great this season to actually play on two functioning legs.

You're a historic run producer. You have had three 140 plus RBI seasons. You're going to pass the 1,000 RBI mark this season. Do you believe you get enough appreciation from Phillies fans?

The fans have been great. You can't please everybody. What I can do is focus on what I can do on the field. But if you take a look at my body of work, it's pretty good. I know when I retire I'll be able to say I left it all out there on the field. I gave it all I had.

Howard is hopeful

Howard thinks Phillies can contend in 2014

Most experts don't have the Phillies in the running for a playoff berth. Do you use that as motivation?

We can use that as motivation, as a chip on our shoulder. I'm sure some of us will do just that.

Are people underestimating this team?

I think they are and they can do that all that they want. I wouldn't judge us where we are now in spring training. We're a work in progress. I have a feeling we're not going to be on all cylinders until toward the end of March. We're aiming for being ready March 31 in Texas. My mom once told me that anyone can beat anyone on any given day. I believe we can beat anyone in the league. We just need to stay healthy and get it going.

What do people not know about this team?

That we get along great. We're feeling really good together. We haven't felt good as a team in about two years. I really like the guys who joined our team like (Marlon) Byrd-man and (A.J.) Burnett. Our combination of talent and how we get along is going to be an awesome combination. You'll see. Let's talk in about a month and a half and you'll see what I'm talking about.

Sixers like Wiggins

76ers looking at Wiggins for top pick

In a loaded draft class, ESPN's Chad Ford reports the 76ers think Kansas freshman Andrew Wiggins is the perfect fit for the their young core, not Duke's Jabari Parker. METRO

Temple transfer

Owls' Lee will transfer to new school

After the Temple men's basketball team failed qualify for the NCAA tournament for the first time in seven seasons, junior forward Anthony Lee decided to transfer from Temple. Coach Fran Dunphy is expected to grant Lee his release. Lee averaged 13.6 points and 8.6 rebounds last season. METRO

Sixers surpass franchise record, keeping positive

NBA. After losing 21 straight games, the 76ers have 15 chances left to end their losing streak.

The Sixers are a laughing stock. They have gone through 19 players during their franchise-long 21-game losing streak and have all but locked up the most pingpong balls in the NBA draft lottery.

So isn't it time they regain a little respect by winning a game?

The team is five losses away from tying the all-time NBA record for consecutive losses, set by the Cleveland Cavaliers just a few seasons ago.

Tony Wroten / GETTY IMAGES

"We try to come with a positive attitude and give people opportunities every day," an optimistic Brett Brown told the media after a loss in Indiana Monday. "There is no 'woe is me' going on around our program. I hope that they play off of my staff and feel me out, because that's the message I'm trying to day-to-day send."

They face the playoff-bound Bulls Wednesday night at the Wells Fargo Center, and then the Knicks at home Friday.

If Philadelphia can't win one of their next two games, they might not win again until next October.

After two games at home this week, the Sixers will try and earn their elusive first win since January in Chicago, San Antonio and Houston next week.
